

Popular Computing

October 9, 2023

To Whom It May Concern,

I am the current copyright holder of the original Popular Computing magazine published by my father, Fred Gruenberger.

I hereby apply the Creative Commons' Attribution-NonCommercial-ShareAlike 4.0 International License [CC BY-NC-SA 4.0] to all 97 issues of Popular Computing, April 1973 thru April 1981.

Under this license, the copyrighted contents of Popular Computing can be:

- Shared — copied and redistributed in any medium or format.
- Adapted — remixed, transformed, and built upon.

With these terms:

- Attribution — appropriate credit must be given to the original Popular Computing by Fred Gruenberger, the license notice must remain intact, and an indication if changes were made. This can be done in any reasonable manner, but not in any way that suggests the licensor endorses the derived work.
- NonCommercial — the material cannot be used for commercial purposes.
- ShareAlike — derived works must be distributed under the same CC BY-NC-SA 4.0 license.

More details on the license can be found here:

<https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc-sa/4.0/legalcode.en>

DocuSigned by:

DFA90EE9C19640D...

John Scott G